The presentation of these figures gives an idea of what war really means. There are few more interesting studies and still less of a broader range than the cost of war.

Some years ago, says The Times-Star Camille Flammarion, the French astron omer and scientist, after a protracted his toric study of war, evolved some startling fracts and figures as a result. He found that from 18,000,000 to 20,000,000 men have been killed every century in Europe of the disaster by war, and every year Europe spend $1,200,000,000 to shed the blood of he men. Each man slain at this age is at cost of $7,000.
